The Guiding Principles also highlight how financial and regulatory technologies can be used to contribute to the effective implementation of CFT measures, in compliance with international law, to help identify and manage terrorist financing risks more effectively and closer to real time.

To conclude, allow me to underscore that throughout these various stages, it is crucial to ensure that the following cross-cutting considerations are addressed:

- A truly multistakeholder approach, with the meaningful involvement of relevant authorities, civil society, academia and private sector, is ensured
- There are effective channels to analyse and mitigate implications on human rights, financial inclusion, legitimate work of NPJBG(NP)-400
